

Editorial

Crisis Issues: In Life and Education

Dr. M Roy Bright

Former Lecturer in Technical Communication, Birla Institute of Applied Sciences.

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.24321/2456.4370.201905>

I N F O

E-mail Id:

mroybright@gmail.com

Orcid Id:

<https://orcid.org/0000-0002-1310-5974>

How to cite this article:

Bright MR. Crisis Issues: In Life and Education. J Adv Res Eng & Edu 2019; 4(3): 1.

In this particular issue we have presented three important crises that the world is facing today. The crisis of Management and Education, the Crisis of the Immigrant Assimilation into a new culture and its expectations and the Crisis of the Identity of the self that displaced people like Orphans and Immigrants face. Through well planned, meticulously researched, and well documented research the writers have trod the fine line between the facts and the realities of human life because research finally depends upon the human needs that surface constantly, demanding answers in the path to progress.

All three articles are practical in nature since the issues are actually being faced by large sections of each society, at the Indian and at the global level.

We bring you contemporary issues and well documented 'a need of the hour' selection of articles for this issue and it is our hope that these articles will generate further research in the greater good of society.

The first informative and detailed article highlights the key regulatory bodies and components set out to ensure an optimal level of quality control over the smooth running of schools today. It details the importance of setting up School Management Committees in the effective running of schools by preparing a bridge between the policies of the government, the authorities running the school, the parents and the students in tandem with the Right of Children to a Free and Compulsory Education Act of 2009.

The next article, 'Leveraging Minority Students' Social Capital and Employment Opportunities: Mentorship and Technology' seeks to address a crucial issue that is affecting the assimilation parameters of migrant students the world over. Without the generating awareness amongst the teaching fraternity and training them to handle this educational crisis cannot be justly addressed. The study undertaken is well supported by the veracity of the statistics available and the suggestion that the system includes technology and mentoring tools accords it the ideal frame work that could be designed for future use for favorable employment at the global level.

The final article is the second and final research on the issues faced by Orphans and Immigrants as people displaced by ancestry and by geography. Issues that are very practical in nature and supported by a lot of research by eminent Psychologists.